Products on the way!

We have managed to get our hands on a few pieces of old, broken sails and with these we have started to make some really cool bags. Currently, we have a ladies clutch bag which is a great assessor to prance around in the yacht club with. We also have three different types of bosun's bags, a medium size ladies bag, wallets and a few other items in the pipeline.

It's really exciting to be creative and make these bags and we are really eager to start putting them in The Dutchess line of products!

Hard at work in the sail loft

With the above said, Skipper Swede has spent a whole lot of time in the sail loft lately. Using Greek Sails old but powerful Pfaff machine, he's been busy creating some really cool bags.

His passion for working with sails and powerful sewing machines comes from very early teens. Back then, he managed to land a summer job for a sailmaker back in Sweden, GranSegel, and he spent several summers learning the tricks of the trade with them.

Currently, he's having his eyes on getting his own heavy duty sewing machine to keep making more stuff for the Dutchess, but also to be able to offer repairs to sails, bimini's, upholstery and (for the landlubbers) awnings. The sewing machine currently on his wish list is a SailRite Ultrafeed LSZ-1. We'll let you know how this progresses and if Santa shows up early this year...

Some pictures of current events!

Something is brooding...

There is a big thing developing on the horizon. We cannot say too much about it just yet as we don't want to spoil the surprise if everything works out. Sufficient to say that we've taken a boat out before season has even started and done a few interesting manoeuvres. We have also immersed ourselves in various forms of study such as reading and tested ourselves on roughly 15 different books on sailing, including the ColRegs which has been dissected to their core.

But even with this hard work it's hard to complain when you get to do it in February, outside in the sunshine, in your t-shirt...

We'll let you know the exciting development of this in the next newsletter!
